MUST CONTINUE SERVICE

Is Opinion of Public Service Commission Relative to Gas Deposit.

A public utility corporation may not discontinue service while it retains any part of a deposit required at time of service is inaugurated, says the decision of the Public Service Commission in regard to the $10 deposit required by the Fayette County Gas company which deposit is declared to be unjust and unfair.

"In case of delinquency, a utility company should apply such portion of a patron's deposit as is necessary to liquidate the bill, and it may at the same time require that the deposit be restored to the original amount," says the opinion. "If the deposit is not restored by the time it has become completely absorbed, service may be discontinued provided that reasonable notice of an adopted and filed rule of its intention so to do has been given. A utility company cannot discontinue service so long as it still has in its possession a portion of the customers' deposit."

Everybody should use San-Cura Soap. It's antiseptic, prevents germ life, keeps the skin clear, soft and velvety, 25 cents. Thompson Medical Co., Titusville, Pa.—Adv.

DEMOCRATIC PARTY IN PENNA. IS "WET" SAYS BOSS PALMER

No Doubt About Party Supporting Bonnell, Despite His Opposition to Ratification Amendment.

A Philadelphia special to the Pittsburgh Dispatch says that National Committeeman A. Mitchell Palmer is the first Democratic organization leader to express himself on the disaster that befall the organization forces in the defeat of Joseph P. Guffey for the gubernatorial nomination at the recent primary election.

"The only construction to be placed upon the nomination of Judge Bonnell for governor is that a majority of the Democrats are 'wet,'" said Palmer. "There was no doubt, he said, that all the Democrats would support Judge Bonnell, and in a general way he indicated that, notwithstanding the disappointment of the present leaders, they would not attempt to hinder the candidate in the carrying on of his campaign."

Judge Bonnell's friends are confident they have elected a majority of the members of the new Democratic City Committee and have already launched a campaign to supplant the chairman of that organization. They want a man in sympathy with the candidate, they declare, and by the same token will demand the election of a state chairman when the State Central Committee meets.

Bonnell is now in the odd position of having as acting chairman of the state organization and director of his campaign the man he defeated for the nomination. Joseph P. Guffey has been acting chairman for considerably more than a year.

TO RELIEVE FARMERS

From Jury Duty to Prevent Interference With Ploughing of Farm Crops.
An appeal has been made by Edgar C. Felton, United States Director of Employment for Pennsylvania, to Judges of the common pleas courts of the state to excuse farmers and farmers' helpers from jury duty so far as is possible. Reports from the various counties indicate that about three hundred farm workers are at present impeded for jury service and in some cases they are reported to be the only farm workers available for work on their respective farms. As the planting season is now at hand, farm help can hardly be spared, in view of the agricultural labor shortage.

In his appeal to the judges of the courts, Mr. Felton suggests that farm workers be permitted to remain at farming during all of the important agricultural seasons which occur at several periods of the year.

SUFFERED 20 YEARS
NOW FINDS RELIEF

Tried Remedy After Remedy Without Avail Until Master Medicine Brought Relief.

"Tanlac has done more for me than anything I ever used and I have tried everything during the twenty years I suffered, says Emanuel G. Richerich, foreman at Small's Flour & Feed Warehouse, York, Pa.

"I had stomach, bowels and nervous trouble, he continued. I had no appetite and got no good out of my food. This wore me down until my health was so weakened that I was attacked by neuralgia and oh! the agony I suffered from those darting, burning pains that would shoot through every nerve in my body. Sometimes it got through the day.

"I tried remedy after remedy. I guess I tried about everything that held out the slightest hope of relief, but none of them did me a particle of good. I was desperate. I felt that I could not stand it any longer. One day I read about Tanlac. I said to myself—I've tried all the others so I'll see if this will help me.

"And it did! It helped me from the very first. I felt better and better with each dose until today I hardly know myself.

"I am going to stick to Tanlac for already those neuralgic pains have left me. My stomach is in such fine condition that I can eat anything and I feel well and vigorous all over.

Tanlac the Master Medicine, is now sold here by the Connellsville Drug Co.

"OUTWITTING THE HUN"

By LIEUTENANT
PAT O'BRIEN

© 1919, BY PATALIA O'BRIEN

O'Brien Standing Beside the First Machine in Which He Saw Active Service.

It often happens that a pilot will be chasing another machine when suddenly he sees it start to spin. Perhaps they are fifteen or thirty thousand feet in the air, and the hostile machine spins down for thousands of feet. He thinks he has hit the other machine and goes home happy that he has brought down another Hun.

He reports the occurrence to the squadron, telling how he shot down his enemy; but when the rest of the squadron come in with their report, or some artillery observation balloon sends in a report, it develops that when a few hundred feet from the ground the supposed down man in the spin has come out of the spin and gone merrily on his way for his airplane.

CHAPTER III.

Captured by the Huns.

I shall not easily forget the 17th of August, 1917. I killed two Huns in the double-seated machine in the morning, another in the evening, and then I was captured myself. I may have spent more eventful days in my life, but I can't recall any just now.

That morning, in crossing the line on an early morning patrol I noticed two German balloons. I decided that as soon as my patrol was over I would go off on my own hook and see what a German balloon looked like at close quarters.

These observation balloons are used by both sides in conjunction with the artillery. A man sits up in the balloon with a wireless apparatus and directs the firing of the guns. From his point of vantage he can follow the work of his own artillery with a remarkable degree of accuracy and at the same time he can observe the enemy's movements and report them.

The Germans are very good at this work, and they use a great number of these balloons. It was considered a very important part of our work to keep them out of the sky.

There are two ways of going after a balloon in a machine. One of them is to cross the lines at a low altitude, flying so near the ground that the man with the anti-aircraft gun can't bother you. You fly along until you get to the level of the balloon and if, in the meantime, they have not drawn the balloon down, you open fire on it and the bullets you use will set it on fire if they land.

The other way is to fly over where you know the balloons to be, put your machine in a spin so that they can't hit you, get above them, spin over the balloon and then open fire. In going back over the line you cross at a few hundred feet.

This is one of the hardest jobs in the service. There is less danger in attacking an enemy's aircraft.

Nevertheless, I had made up my mind to either get those balloons or make them descend, and I only hoped that they would stay on the job until I had a chance at them.

When our two hours' duty was up, therefore, I dropped out of the formation as we crossed the lines and turned back again.

I was at a height of 15,000 feet, considerably higher than the balloons. Shutting my motor off, I dropped down through the clouds, thinking to find the balloons at about five or six miles behind the German lines.

Just as I came out of the cloud banks I saw below me, about a thousand feet, a two-seater hostile machine doing artillery observation and directing the German guns. This was at a point about four miles behind the German lines.

Evidently the German artillery saw me and put out ground signals to attract the Hun machine's attention, for I saw the observer quit his work and grab his gun, while the pilot stuck the nose of his machine straight down.

But they were too late to escape me. I was diving toward them at a speed of probably two hundred miles an hour, shooting all the time as fast as possible. Their only chance lay in the possibility that the force of my dive might break my wings. I knew my danger in that direction, but as soon as I came out of my dive the Huns would have their chance to get me, and I knew I had to get them first and take a chance on my wings holding out.

Fortunately some of my first bullets found their mark, and I was able to come out of my dive at about four thousand feet. They never came out of theirs!

But right then came the hottest situation in the air I had ever experienced up to that time. The depth of my dive had brought me within reach of the machine guns from the ground, and they also put a barrage around me of sharpshooters from anti-aircraft guns and I had an opportunity to "ride the barrage," as they call it in the R. P. C. To me the situation more interesting, they began shooting "flaming onions" at me. "Flaming onions" are rockets shot from a rocket gun. They are used to hit a machine when it is flying low, and they are effective up to about five thousand feet. Sometimes they are shot up one after another in strings of about eight, and they are one of the hardest things to go through. If they hit the machine, it is bound to catch fire and then the jig is up.

All the time, too, I was being attacked by "Archie"—the anti-aircraft gun. I escaped the machine guns and the "flaming onions," but "Archie," the anti-aircraft gun, got me four or five times. Every time a bullet plugged me, or rather my machine, it made a loud bang, on account of the tension on the material covering the wings.

None of their shots hurt me until I was about a mile from our lines, and then they hit my motor. Fortunately, I still had altitude enough to drift on to our own side of the lines, for my motor was completely out of commission. They just raised the dickens with me all the time I was descending, and I began to think I would strike the ground before crossing the line, but there was a slight wind in my favor, and it carried me two miles behind our lines. There the balloons I had gone out to get had the satisfaction of "pin-pointing" me. Through the directions which they were able to give to their artillery they commenced shelling my machine where it lay.

This particular work is to direct the fire of their artillery, and they are used just as the artillery observation airplanes are. Usually two men are stationed in each balloon. They ascend to a height of several thousand feet about five miles behind their own lines and are equipped with wireless and signaling apparatus. They watch the burst of their own artillery, check up the position, get the range, and direct the next shot.

When conditions are favorable they are able to direct the shots so accurately that it is quick work destroying the object of their attack. It was such a balloon as this that got my position, marked me out, called for an artillery shot, and they commenced shelling my machine where it lay. If I had got the two balloons instead of the airplane, I probably would not have lost my machine, for he would in all probability have gone on home and not bothered about getting my range and causing the destruction of my machine.

I landed in a part of the country that was literally covered with shell holes. Fortunately my machine was not badly damaged by the forced landing. I leisurely got out, walked around to see what the damage was, and concluded that it could be easily repaired. In fact, I thought if I could find a space long enough between shell holes to get a start before leaving the ground that I would be able to fly on from there.

I was still examining my plane and considering the matter of a few slight repairs, without any particular thought for my own safety in that unprotected spot, when a shell came whizzing through the air, knocked me to the ground and landed a few feet away. It had no sooner struck than I made a run for cover and crawled into a shell hole. I would have liked to get farther away, but I didn't know where the next shell would burst, and I thought I was fairly safe there, so I squatted down and let them blaze away.

The only damage I suffered was from the mud which splattered up in my face and over my clothes. That was my introduction to a shell hole, and I resolved right there that the infantry could have all the shell-hole fighting they wanted, but it did not appeal to me, though they live in them through many long nights and I had only sought shelter there for a few minutes.

After the Germans had completely demolished my machine and caused firing, I waited there a short time, fearing perhaps they might send over a lucky shot, hoping to get me after all. But evidently they concluded enough shells had been wasted on one man. I crawled out cautiously, shook the mud off, and I looked over in the direction where my machine had once been. There wasn't enough left for a decent souvenir, but nevertheless I got a few "such as they were," and ready observing that nothing could be done with what was left, I made my way back to infantry headquarters, where I was able to telephone in a

OX ROAST POSTPONED UNTIL JULY FOURTH.

In conformity with the spirit of the President's proclamation, setting aside Memorial Day as a day of public humiliation, prayer and fasting, the committee in charge of the ox roast and picnic to be held in Putnam's grove, in the interests of the Red Cross, has decided to postpone the event until the fourth of July. This extension of time will also allow the details of the event to be worked out more completely and make it possible to add many features which could not be made ready between now and Thursday.

Tickets already sold will be honored on the postponed date. Persons engaged in selling tickets are asked to make report to Joseph Tippman, treasurer.

The committee in charge assures the public that it will be fully compensated, through additional attractions and features, for the postponement of what is certain to be the biggest event of the kind ever held in this vicinity.
